57) Abstract :

The present invention relates to the preparation of transdermal patches of combined antiretroviral drugs, lamivudine and stavudine. The present invention mainly related to the field of pharmaceuticals specific to drug delivery field. More particularly application of this invention relates to preparation of transdermal patches of antiretroviral drugs; lamivudine and stavudine for transdermal administration. The prepared controlled release transdermal patches of antiretroviral drugs; lamivudine and stavudine for transdermal administration. The invention relates to preparation of transdermal patches by solvent casting technique using polymer blends of hydroxypropyl methyl cellulose (HPMC), ethylcellulose (EC) and cellulose acetate (CA) in different ratios of 1:0, 1:2.66, 1:4 and 1:8 as film formers and drugs in different weight ratios. The invention relates to characterization of prepared transdermal patches for tensile strength, elongation, water vapour transmission, water vapour absorption, drug-polymer compatibility, In-vitro drug release and accelerated physical stability studies. The studies demonstrated successful preparation of transdermal patches and effect of polymer blends (HPMC, EC and CA) in various ratios on drug release. The WVT was between 0.3557 ± 0.063 and 0.4980 ± 0.013 and the WVA varied between $41.04 \pm 2.26\%$ and $6.09 \pm 3.46\%$ after 7 days. The folding endurance was found between 273 ± 3.37 and 292 ± 2.23 number of times of folding. The flatness for all the patches was 100%. SEM analysis showed the surface of patch with smooth and uniform throughout. The FTIR and thermograms showed no drug-polymer interactions. The diffractogram of lamivudine exhibited a series of intense peaks at 21.387, 24.877 and 31.420 which were indicative of crystalline nature of lamivudine. Similarly peaks were observed at 10.083, 16.843, 16.843, 18.732, 22.366, 24.143 and 28.382 which correspond to stavudine. For the tested formulation (F9) no specific peaks of both drugs were obtained. Formulation F9 showed better in vitro diffusion release of drugs up to 14 h than that of F1 and F5. Formulation F9 showed extended release of lamivudine and stavudine with $98.33 \pm 1.24\%$ and $96.25 \pm 2.26\%$ respectively. Formulation F1 released lamivudine ($98.41 \pm 1.37\%$) and stavudine ($98.86 \pm 2.36\%$) for 8 h. Formulation F5 showed lamivudine release of $96.21 \pm 1.56\%$ and stavudine release of $97.23 \pm 1.87\%$ for 13 h. In all the cases the drug diffusion was reciprocal to the polymer concentration in the formulations. All the formulations followed zero order drug release kinetics. Formulation F9 showed higher rate of drug release compared to that of other formulations. The higher correlation coefficient values (>0.955) of Higuchi and Korsmeyer plots. Similarity factor (f2) for optimized formulation F9 compared before and after stability testing was found to be 86.64%. The drug content of the formulation F9 before and after the accelerated stability studies was found to be $98.27 \pm 5.26\%$ and $96.58 \pm 3.47\%$ respectively. Student t-test was conducted on drug content and the value obtained was 0.28 which was lesser than the table value of 0.05 at 95% confidence limits. There was no significant difference observed in the drug content uniformity before and after the stability studies. The prepared transdermal patches loaded with lamivudine and stavudine could be successfully employed for reducing toxicity.
